10. Miscellaneous

I gave birth twice during a short period: 2007-2010, first to my baby daughter, Noa, and two and a half years after that to my son Eviatar. Despite the personal and professional challenges that I encountered during this period, I persevered in my research and teaching duties. More significantly, I made my maternal experience one of the important topics of my current research (as explained in detail in the last section).

K. Other Works Connected with my Scholarly Field

2013-2015 I was a member of a Van Lear Institute research group "Between East and West: The Novel as a New Framework for Considering the Modern Middle East" (Mediterranean Neighbors section). My work centered on the Spanish language novels written by women of the Jewish Aleppian Diaspora.

2017 I supervised the final paper of a high school student, Noya Harari, as part of "Derech Haruach" program. The paper is entitled "A Feminist Reading of Gaga", and was awarded with the Van Lear Prize for excellent high school students' papers in the Humanities.

Summary of my Activities and Future Plans

Since completing my PhD, I have specialized in phenomenology and philosophies of the body. My present research addresses philosophical (mainly phenomenological) perspectives on embodiment and its connections to the conceptualization of the subject, especially within continental philosophy and gender theories.

Currently, I am working on proposing a novel philosophical analysis of the experience of labor and childbirth, grounded mainly in feminist phenomenology and using an innovative approach to challenge feminist theory's current discourses and critiques of labor. This study will change how feminist theory understands and relates to childbirth. Moreover, its findings may illuminate not only the question of labor and its effects on parturient women (mainly on their condition as subjects either provided with or emptied of agency), but also significant issues regarding how phenomenology conceptualizes embodiment and embodied subjects.

This project will present a deep, meticulous analysis of some major themes surrounding the problem of subjectivity in labor, themes that include for instance the eroticism of labor, the special temporality in which labor is experienced and the meaning of home-birth. This research will be mainly informed by the theories of thinkers such as Bergson, Beauvoir, Husserl, Merleau-Ponty, and Young, with feminist uses and criticisms of their philosophies at the center of my analysis.
